The lines at polling places in and around Boston were so long at times yesterday that some people said they waited in line 60 minutes or more. Many people stuck waiting took to Twitter to vent their frustrations and kill time. About 3.2 million voters in Massachusetts were expected to head to the polls yesterday.

Elizabeth Warren unseats Scott Brown in Senate race

Harvard professor Elizabeth Warren was elected to the Senate yesterday and unseated Sen. Scott Brown after his abbreviated time in Washington, D.C.

"To all the young people who did everything right and are drowning in debt, we're going to invest in you," Warren said to her supporters.

Warren, who is the first woman senator elected to represent the Bay State, was projected to win with 53 percent of the vote with 70 percent of precincts reporting.

Massachusetts Democrats rejoiced last night with news of Warren's win as the political party recaptured the seat once held for decades by late Sen. Ted Kennedy. The party had been on a mission to reclaim the seat since Brown, a Republican, surprised many Democrats and won a special election in 2010 after Kennedy's death.

Brown conceded the race at about 10:30 p.m. and told supporters that what mattered is what "we've achieved in between these two elections."

"There are no obstacles you can't overcome and defeat is only temporary," said Brown, which made supporters erupt in a loud cheer.

The tight race was closely watched for months and was monitored by national news outlets last night during election coverage. For months, poll results went back and forth on who was leading among likely voters. But only a few days before Election Day, a majority of recent polls had Warren with an edge. Political experts had said that Warren would likely benefit from running during a presidential election as Massachusetts voters typically pick Democrats.

One of the more controversial issues of the campaign was Warren's claim of Native American heritage, which some groups called into question. However, that seemed to not be enough of a factor for voters.

At Warren's election night party at the Fairmont Copley Plaza hotel, supporters crowded into a ballroom, sipping wine and sporting both Warren and Obama stickers.

Erin Santhouse said she voted for Warren because she wanted Democrats to have control of the Senate and because of her views on "women's reproductive choices."

"Warren would vote the same way I would vote on the issues," said the 22-year-old student living in Boston.

Kerry's impact

Sen. John Kerry, the state's senior senator and chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, has been named in various media outlets as a likely pick for the next secretary of state if President Barack Obama won re-election.

If Kerry is picked for that position, Warren would become the state's senior senator.

A special election would need to be held between 145 and 160 days from the vacancy to fill the empty seat. Brown could attempt another special election victory.

In 2009, when Sen. Ted Kennedy died, Gov. Deval Patrick named a replacement to temporarily fill the seat until the 2010 special election that Brown won.

A look at the state's hottest races

A pair of congressional races here in Massachusetts that had been closely watched for months for different reasons were finally decided last night.

Joe Kennedy III will restore the Kennedy name to Congress with his win in the fourth congressional district. Kennedy, 32, and a former prosecutor, is the grandson of Robert F. Kennedy.

The Democrat's election to the House seat held by retiring Rep. Barney Frank means that a Kennedy will again have a presence in Congress.

Kennedy beat Republican Sean Bielat who had previously sought election to Congress, but failed to beat Frank in 2010.

On the North Shore, Democratic incumbent Rep. John Tierney, a Congressman for 16 years, fought a contentious battle with his Republican opponent, former state Senate minority leader Richard Tisei.

Tierney has faced criticism this election cycle after his wife's family was accused of running an illegal gambling ring. She pled guilty on charges of aiding and abetting the illegal internet business and served a month in prison and five months of house arrest.

Tisei served in the state legislature for 26 years, and was the Republican nominee for Lt. Governor in 2010. METRO

"2011 MA Retailer of the Year"

Defining the questions:

Question 1: "Right to Repair"

This initiative would require automobile manufacturers, starting with model year 2015, to allow vehicle owners and independent repair facilities to have access to the same vehicle diagnostic and repair information available to the manufacturers' dealers and repair facilities.

Question 2: "Death with Dignity"

This initiative would allow terminally ill patients to get prescriptions for lethal medications.

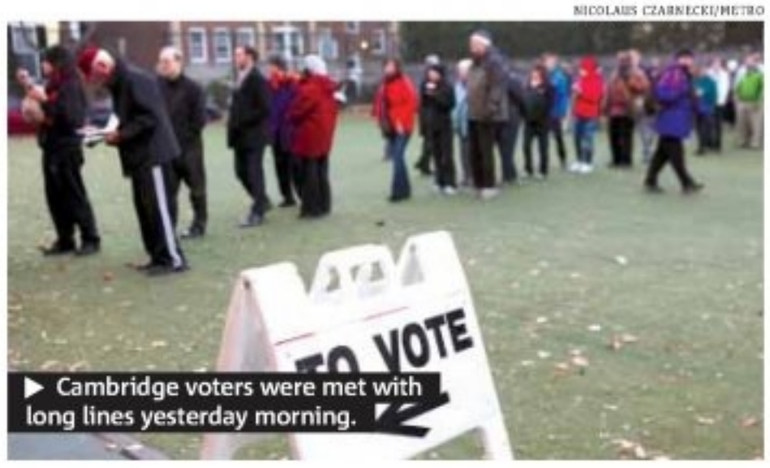
The patients must have been given six months or less to live, and must be considered mentally capable to make the life-ending decision.

Question 3: "Medical Marijuana"

This measure would legalize the use of medical marijuana. Patients who meet certain medical conditions would be able to use marijuana produced by state-regulated centers without penalty. In some cases, users may be able to grow it themselves.

State says 'yes' to medical pot and repair bill; no to assisted suicide bill

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO



▶ Cambridge voters were met with long lines yesterday morning.

Massachusetts voters yesterday gave the green light for ill people to ease their pain, but as of press time appeared to have rejected a measure that would have let them end it altogether.

The state's medical marijuana initiative passed by 63 percent, not a shock to supporters who were confident yesterday the state would adopt the law.

"It's going to win because people value compassion more than they value fear, especially unreasonable fear," said Bill Downing of the Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition.

"For many decades the government has created an atmosphere of reefer madness. As people become aware that cannabis is the safest therapeutic substance known to man, they will start to lose their fear."

As of press time, however, 75 percent of precincts reported the "Death with Dignity" measure failed, with 51 percent of voters rejecting it.

Just hours before polls closed, one of the initiative's opponents said he was "cautiously optimistic" it would fail.

"We think that a lot of people have had time to carefully consider this bill, and have seen that it is badly written and flawed, and would be dangerous for the state," said John Kelly, director of Second Thoughts, a group of Massachusetts residents with disabilities that oppose assisted suicide.

Opponents have said that if approved, the law would be a recipe for elder abuse, and while supporters of the measure argue it would give control to terminally ill patients, Kelly said the law could pressure ill people into ending their own lives.

"When people feel a burden because they're spending money on their health care bills, this will set up a situation where people feel they need to die," he said.

The Right to Repair bill was also approved by 85 percent.

STRETCH. STRENGTHEN. AS YOU GET OLDER, SMART MOVES TO MAKE. BUT DON'T FORGET TO VACCINATE.

ZOSTAVAX® (Zoster Vaccine Live) is available at certain pharmacies and medical practices. Talk to your health care professional or visit FIND*ZOSTAVAX*.com for more information.

Now's the time to help prevent Shingles with ZOSTAVAX.

ZOSTAVAX is a vaccine that helps prevent Shingles in adults 50 years of age or older. Shingles is caused by the same virus that causes chickenpox. The virus stays in your body and can resurface at any time as Shingles—a painful, blistering rash. And no matter how healthy you feel, your risk increases as you get older.

The sooner you get vaccinated with ZOSTAVAX, the better your chances of protecting yourself from Shingles. In fact, the ACIP* of the CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) recommends that appropriate adults 60 years of age and older get vaccinated to help prevent Shingles.

Talk to your health care professional to see if ZOSTAVAX is right for you.

ZOSTAVAX is given as a single shot. ZOSTAVAX cannot be used to treat Shingles, or the nerve pain that may follow Shingles, once you have it. For more information, visit ZOSTAVAX.com or call 1-877-9 SHINGLES.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

- You should not get ZOSTAVAX if you are allergic to any of its ingredients, including gelatin or neomycin, have a weakened immune system, take high doses of steroids, or are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. You should not get ZOSTAVAX to prevent chickenpox.
- Talk to your health care professional if you plan to get ZOSTAVAX at the same time as PNEUMOVAX®23 (Pneumococcal Vaccine Polyvalent) because it may be better to get these vaccines at least 4 weeks apart.
- Possible side effects include redness, pain, itching, swelling, hard lump, warmth, or bruising at the injection site, as well as headache.
- ZOSTAVAX contains a weakened chickenpox virus. Tell your health care professional if you will be in close contact with newborn infants, someone who may be pregnant and has not had chickenpox or been vaccinated against chickenpox, or someone who has problems with their immune system. ZOSTAVAX®
Zoster Vaccine Live

Patient Information about ZOSTAVAX® (pronounced "ZOS tah vax") Generic name: Zoster Vaccine Live 9989115

You should read this summary of information about ZOSTAVAX before you are vaccinated. If you have any questions about ZOSTAVAX after reading this page, you should ask your health care provider. This information does not take the place of talking about ZOSTAVAX with your doctor, nurse, or other health care provider. Only your health care provider can decide if ZOSTAVAX is right for you.

What is ZOSTAVAX and how does it work?
ZOSTAVAX is a vaccine that is used for adults 50 years of age or older to prevent shingles (also known as zoster).

ZOSTAVAX contains a weakened chickenpox virus (varicella-zoster virus).

ZOSTAVAX works by helping your immune system protect you from getting shingles.

If you do get shingles even though you have been vaccinated, ZOSTAVAX may help prevent the nerve pain that can follow shingles in some people. ZOSTAVAX does not protect everyone, so some people who get the vaccine may still get shingles.

ZOSTAVAX cannot be used to treat shingles, or the nerve pain that may follow shingles, once you have it.

What do I need to know about shingles and the virus that causes it?
Shingles is caused by the same virus that causes chickenpox. Once you have had chickenpox, the virus can stay in your nervous system for many years. For reasons that are not fully understood, the virus may become active again and give you shingles. Age and problems with the immune system may increase your chances of getting shingles.

Shingles is a rash that is usually on one side of the body. The rash begins as a cluster of small red spots that often blister. The rash can be painful. Shingles rashes usually last up to 30 days and, for most people, the pain associated with the rash lessens as it heals.

Who should not get ZOSTAVAX?
You should not get ZOSTAVAX if you:
- are allergic to any of its ingredients.
- are allergic to gelatin or neomycin.
- have a weakened immune system (for example, an immune deficiency, leukemia, lymphoma, or HIV/AIDS).
- take high doses of steroids by injection or by mouth.
- are pregnant or plan to get pregnant.

You should not get ZOSTAVAX to prevent chickenpox.

Children should not get ZOSTAVAX.

How is ZOSTAVAX given?
ZOSTAVAX is given as a single dose by injection under the skin.

What should I tell my health care provider before I get ZOSTAVAX?
You should tell your health care provider if you:
- have or have had any medical problems.
- take any medicines, including non-prescription medicines, and dietary supplements.
- have any allergies, including allergies to neomycin or gelatin.
- had an allergic reaction to another vaccine.
- are pregnant or plan to become pregnant.
- are breast-feeding.

Tell your health care provider if you expect to be in close contact (including household contact) with newborn infants, someone who may be pregnant and has not had chickenpox or been vaccinated against chickenpox, or someone who has problems with their immune system. Your health care provider can tell you what situations you may need to avoid.

Can I get ZOSTAVAX with other vaccines?
Talk to your health care provider if you plan to get ZOSTAVAX at the same time as the flu vaccine.

Talk to your health care provider if you plan to get ZOSTAVAX at the same time as PNEUMOVAX®23 (Pneumococcal Vaccine Polyvalent) because it may be better to get these vaccines at least 4 weeks apart.

What are the possible side effects of ZOSTAVAX?
The most common side effects that people in the clinical studies reported after receiving the vaccine include:
- redness, pain, itching, swelling, hard lump, warmth, or bruising where the shot was given.
- headache

The following additional side effects have been reported with ZOSTAVAX:
- allergic reactions, which may be serious and may include difficulty in breathing or swallowing. If you have an allergic reaction, call your doctor right away.
- chickenpox
- fever
- hives at the injection site
- joint pain
- muscle pain
- nausea
- rash
- rash at the injection site
- swollen glands near the injection site (that may last a few days to a few weeks)

Tell your health care provider if you have any new or unusual symptoms after you receive ZOSTAVAX. For a complete list of side effects, ask your health care provider.

Call 1-800-986-8999 to report any exposure to ZOSTAVAX during pregnancy.

What are the ingredients of ZOSTAVAX?
Active Ingredient: a weakened form of the varicella-zoster virus.

Inactive Ingredients: sucrose, hydrolyzed porcine gelatin, sodium chloride, monosodium L-glutamate, sodium phosphate dibasic, potassium phosphate monobasic, potassium chloride.

This page summarizes important information about ZOSTAVAX. If you would like more information, talk to your health care provider or visit the website at www.ZOSTAVAX.com or call 1-800-622-4477.

News in brief

Cambridge police seek armed robber

CAMBRIDGE. Police are seeking help identifying a man who has held up at least two pharmacies in Cambridge.

Police recently posted surveillance images online of the suspect. He was wearing a mask or cloth over his face and was armed with a black revolver when he held up the Ciampa Apothecary on Nov. 2. He is also believed to be involved in a robbery of an Inman Square pharmacy in April.

Police described the suspect as a white male, about 6 feet 3 inches tall. He was wearing a green hooded sweatshirt, jeans, white sneakers and latex gloves. METRO

Man fakes way into South Boston home

BOSTON. Police are searching for a man who told a woman he was from the city's water department to gain access to her South Boston apartment.

The woman told police that the man knocked on her door about 10:30 a.m. Monday and said he needed to access her apartment because of a leak next door.

When she asked to see his credentials, the man pushed her aside and went to the bathroom, where he turned on the water in the tub before going into her bedroom. The woman went to turn the water off in the tub and that's when the man fled the apartment.

The woman said her cordless phone was missing. She also told police similar incidents have happened three times before. METRO

Disappointment at the Boston Convention Center after Romney loses run for the White House

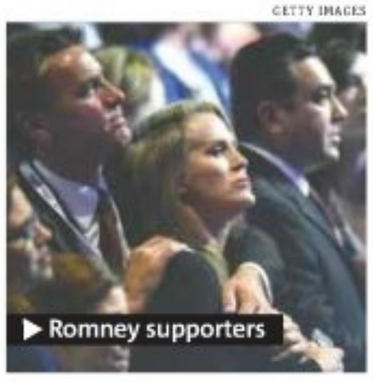
The mood was somber at the Boston Convention Center just after 11 p.m. last night, when President Barack Obama took Ohio, and another four years in office.

Scores of supporters poured into the center in South Boston to support Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney, and energy was high until word of the Republican's failure came through after a tight race.

Outside the convention center, security was tight. Boston police and security officials used city dump trucks to block off Summer Street, about 100 yards away from the building, and police dogs sniffed cars as they approached the arena.

The convention center looked powerful. Spotlights could be seen from the convention center a giant TV screen played coverage of the election.

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Romney supporters

Some people were holding pieces of cardboard with Romney buttons attached to them trying to sell them to people going inside, but hardly anyone was buying them.

Tim Engelskirchen, from Charlotte N.C., was trying to sell the buttons.

"They can't afford buttons, they all have to pay taxes now," said Engelskirchen, an Obama supporter.

Shortly after the call was made people began trickling out of the convention center, boarding buses and heading home. They said they were disappointed at the outcome of the election.

Dan Gibson of Andover said it was "not a great feeling inside" upon hearing the call.

"Well, it was a great campaign, but I feel badly for the country," he said, while also giving credit to President Obama for the win.

Krista Muzzioli, 21, of Romney's hometown of Belmont said she too was disappointed, "I think its very disappointing because America deserves a president like Romney, and we really can't survive another four years with Obama."

Private jets

The Boston Globe reported yesterday that private jets flowed into Logan International Airport as Romney's supporters arrived for his post-election party in the Seaport District.

Edward Freni, director of aviation for Logan, said an unusually large number of Gulfstream corporate jets aimed to park at the airport, and that the airport accommodated 80 of them by 4:30 p.m., roughly double the 40 to 50 it sees on a typical day. Freni told the Globe that Logan staff was trying to "shoe horn" the planes in.

Glass of wine a day cuts breast cancer risk, says study

NEW YORK. Women with breast cancer can boost their chances of long-term survival by drinking a glass of wine a day, according to new research

Scientists at the university of Cambridge said that women who drink a medium-sized glass of wine a day cut their chances of dying within a decade of diagnosis by 20 percent.

Even drinking half of a medium-sized glass cut the chances of death by 18 percent.

Researchers studied more than 13,500 women who had been diagnosed with and treated for breast cancer. The women's progress from diagnosis was followed for up to 15 years. METRO

Home prices dip in September

NEW YORK. U.S. home prices slipped in September after gaining for six months in a row as values were weighed down by cheaper distressed sales, data from CoreLogic showed yesterday.

CoreLogic Inc.'s home price index fell 0.3 percent from August. Prices were still up strongly compared with a year ago, rising 5 percent for the biggest increase since July 2006.

Excluding distressed sales, prices were up 0.5 percent from August and also gained 5 percent from last year.

Three Western US states vote on legalizing recreational pot

Voters in three western U.S. states went to the polls yesterday to decide whether to legalize marijuana for recreational use in a move that could spur a showdown with the federal government, with polls showing legalization ahead in Washington and Colorado.

If voters approve the measures, the states could become the first in the country to legalize the recreational use of pot. Each of the initiatives would see marijuana taxed and would regulate its sale in special stores to adults age 21 and older.

But the prospect of legalizing pot, which the federal government considers an illicit and dangerous drug liable to be abused, has raised concerns about how to keep stoned drivers off the roads and joints out of the hands of teenagers.

Surveys show legalization measures ahead in Washington state, where campaign finance records say its sponsors have raised $6 million, and Colorado, where backers have pulled in nearly $2 million. But legalization was trailing in Oregon, where a grassroots campaign was struggling to sway voters.

A survey of 932 likely voters in Washington state released on Saturday by Public Policy Polling found 53 percent support legalization, with a margin of error of 3.2 percent. REUTERS

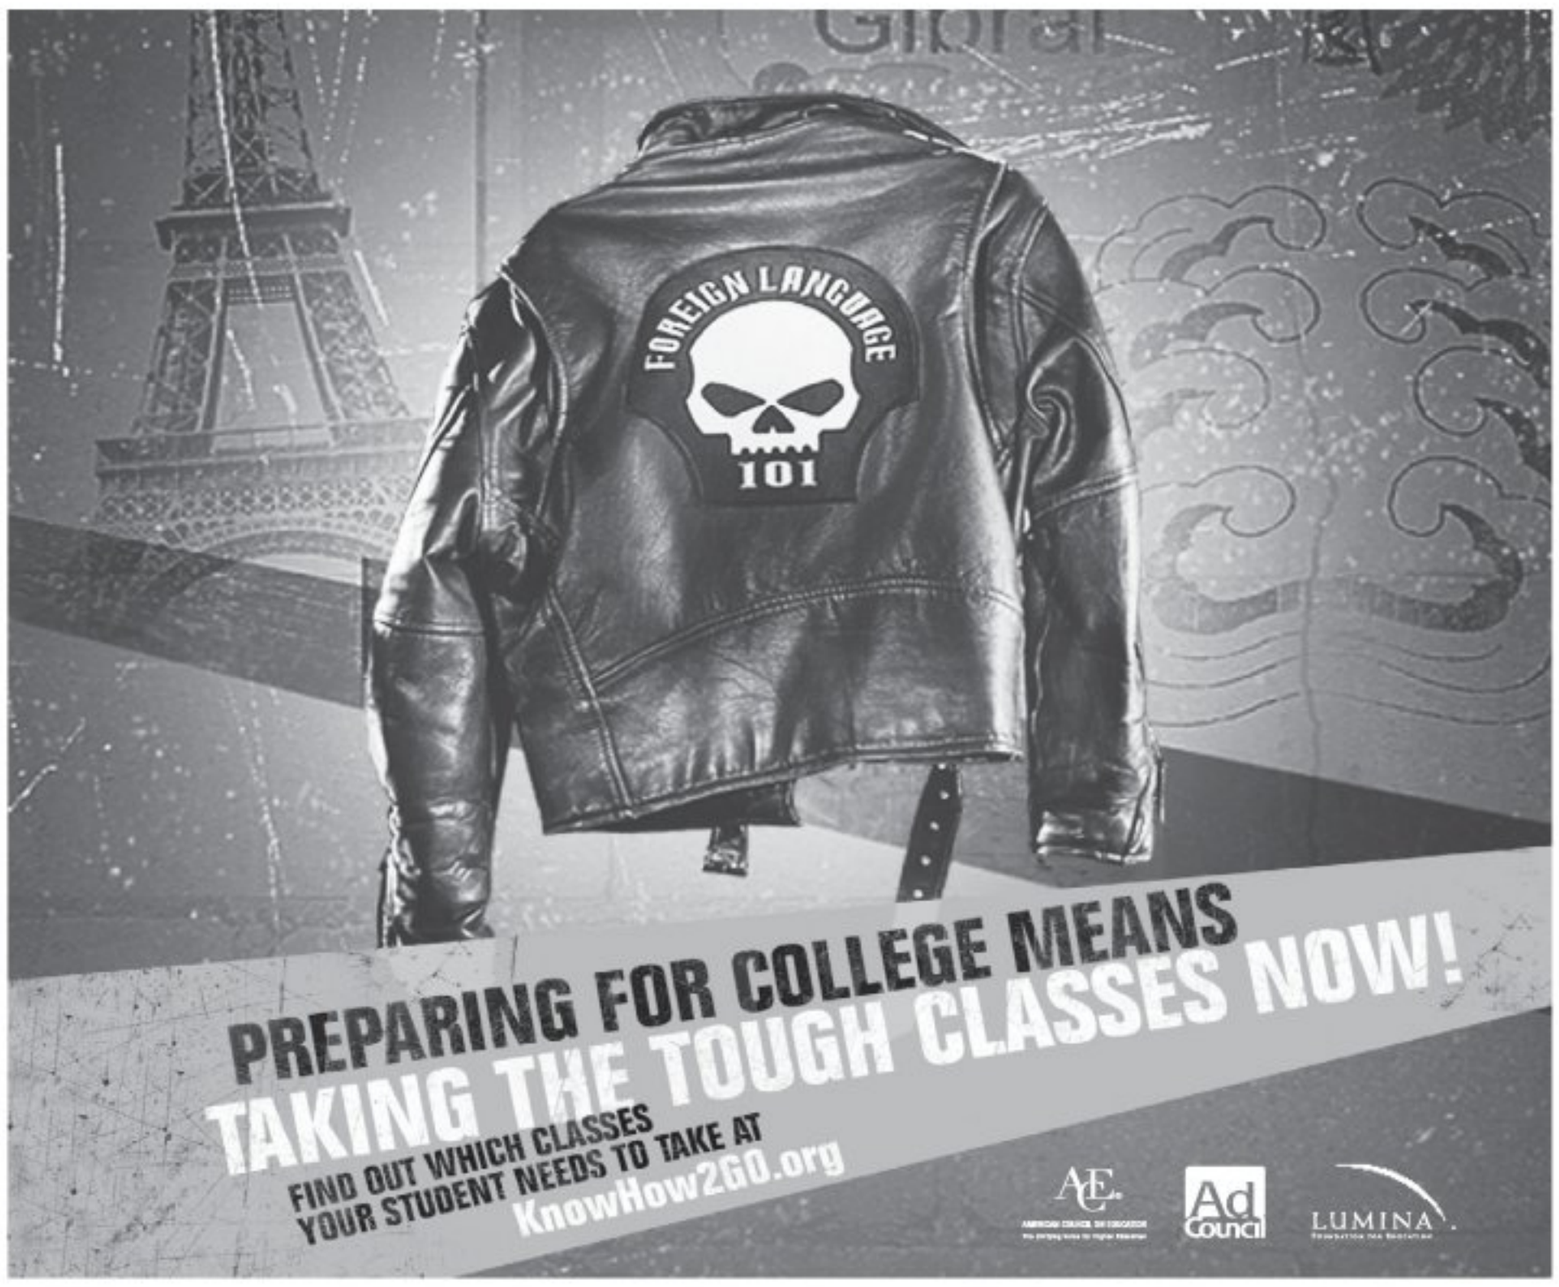
Drug Policy Alliance Executive Director Ethan Nadelmann, whose affiliate groups have funded current and past legalization initiatives, said he was more optimistic about legalization prospects now than he was before a California legalization referendum that voters rejected in 2010. "In this case, the polling has stayed up there. It's almost like we're seeing a surge of support for this in the final week," Nadelmann said.



Nokia Windows phone priced to undercut rivals

AT&T set a $50 starting price for Nokia's latest Windows smartphones, on which the struggling Finnish phone maker is pinning its hopes for a turnaround.

The No. 2 U.S. mobile provider said yesterday that it will sell the Nokia Lumia 820 for $49.99 and the flagship Lumia 920 phone for $99.99, compared with its $199.99 pricing for the HTC Corp Windows Phone 8X device.

Nokia, which has lost out hugely to Apple Inc. and Samsung Electronics Co. in recent years, is hinging its entire future on Microsoft's mobile software. HTC mostly sells phones based on Google Inc.'s Android software but is hoping to diversify with Windows Phone 8.

The three devices are key for Microsoft, which is banking on its Windows Phone 8 software to challenge Apple's iPhone and Android phones from vendors like Samsung.

The low Nokia price shows that volumes are more important to the company than profits as it hopes to rebuild a U.S. customer base, Current Analysis analyst Avi Greengart said.

And with such aggressive pricing, the only reason these phones could fail to sell well is if consumers decide they are not interested in the Microsoft software, Greengart said.

"It's almost a referendum on Microsoft's operating system," said the analyst.

The prices are for customers who sign a two-year wireless contract with AT&T. The phones, which are available beginning Nov. 9, can be pre-ordered. REUTERS

AT&T is also offering a free wireless charging plate with the purchase of the Lumia 920, which is worth about $80, according to an estimate from Greengart, who used previous wireless chargers as a benchmark.

Study: Women can smell a wimp a mile off

Women are able to smell cowardly men, according to a study by a Dutch university.

The smell of a man's sweat when he is afraid or repulsed triggered similar emotions in women near them, said Dr. Gun Semin of Utrecht University.

The findings suggested that certain emotions were "contagious" and could be detected via chemical signals, Dr. Semin added.

Six-foot fugitive crocodile finally captured in Gaza

A crocodile on the run from a Gaza zoo for the past 18 months has finally been captured, police said yesterday.

The 6-foot-long reptile was spotted several weeks ago in sewage pools in the northern Gaza Strip, and villagers complained he had been eating their livestock. Police called in fishermen, who netted the crocodile on Monday.

"He's a beautiful troublemaker," police spokesman Ayman al-Batniji said. "We really sweated to take him alive." REUTERS

Eastern US earthquakes pack strong punch

WASHINGTON. Shock waves from earthquakes in the eastern United States can travel much farther and cause damage over larger areas than previously thought, the U.S. Geological Survey said yesterday in a study of the strong quake that hit Virginia last year.

The 5.8-magnitude quake triggered landslides at distances four times farther — and over an area 20 times larger — than previous research showed, the USGS said in a statement.

The study offers more evidence that although the East Coast has fewer quakes than the West Coast, the damage can be more extensive. REUTERS

Supreme court weighs limit on double jeopardy

WASHINGTON. Lamar Evans was acquitted of burning down a vacant house after his trial judge mistakenly required Michigan prosecutors to prove more than they needed to, all sides in the case now agree.

The U.S. Supreme Court yesterday considered whether Evans can now be tried again.

A decision, expected by the end of June, could punch a hole in the U.S. Constitution's general prohibition against being tried twice for the same crime, known as double jeopardy. REUTERS

Congress subpoenas co-owner of meningitis-linked company

The chief pharmacist at the company linked to the deadly meningitis outbreak has received a subpoena to appear before a congressional committee after he declined to appear voluntarily.

The House Energy and Commerce committee issued the subpoena to Barry Cadden, co-owner of the New England Compounding Center and its chief pharmacist, before the pharmacy surrendered its license in the wake of the outbreak.

"With more than 400 people infected and 30 deaths, it is critical that we hear directly from the head of the facility linked to the outbreak," said Committee Chairman Fred Upton and Ranking Member Henry Waxman in a statement. "Since Mr. Cadden has indicated he will not appear voluntarily, we are left with no choice but to issue a subpoena."

James Coffey, director of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Pharmacy, which regulates pharmacists in Massachusetts, has also been invited to testify. A spokeswoman did not immediately respond to a question as to whether Coffey had agreed to attend.

Margaret Hamburg, commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, is scheduled to testify. REUTERS

Lawsuits

NECC said it expects a Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation to rule within the next two to four months on whether to consolidate a number of lawsuits in one court. The decision could come soon after a hearing is held Jan. 31 in Florida.

Legal battle

- NECC lawyers, for example, say NECC did nothing wrong and have been caught in a crossfire of conflicting federal and state laws concerning specialty pharmacies.
- NECC lawyers argue various states have themselves enacted differing and, in some cases, conflicting regulations on the practice of pharmacies.
- "Permitted practices in some states may be arguably impermissible manufacturing by FDA and other states," NECC lawyers said Monday in documents filed in the U.S. District Court in Massachusetts.
- Peter McGrath said NECC and its attorneys are just buying time as they figure out how to contend with lawsuits and investigations coming at them on a number of fronts.

Biden crashes jet party in Ohio

If there was any doubt that the U.S. presidential fight hinges on Ohio, an awkward campaign airplane traffic jam at the Cleveland airport yesterday made it clear.

Minutes after Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney touched down on the tarmac, Vice President Joe Biden swooped in on Air Force Two for an unannounced — but what the White House said was long-planned — visit.

Biden's move seemed aimed at dampening the challenger's 11th-hour visit to the battleground state.

Romney, who was waiting for running mate Paul Ryan to land, stayed onboard his plane until Biden boarded his motorcade and left the tarmac, which became even more crowded when Ryan's plane landed minutes later.

Only President Barack Obama, who was spending the day in Chicago, was missing from the dance of the jets. REUTERS

Markets want clear winner

Traders and investors were in agreement on one thing as voters cast their ballots in yesterday's U.S. presidential election: The markets want a clear winner by Wednesday morning.

U.S. equity markets rose on Tuesday, in part due to relief that the drawn-out campaign had reached its end. Some market analysts forecast doomsday scenarios if a particular candidate wins — predictions that usually reflect their political leanings more than anything else.

Markets hate uncertainty, and having a drawn-out U.S. presidential election is one of the worst prospects. No one on either side wants a repeat of the protracted fight that followed the 2000 race between Al Gore and George W. Bush. REUTERS

Obama is president

At 11:10 p.m. last night, TV networks around the country declared that Barack Obama had won a tight race in Ohio — confirming his re-election as President of the United States.

Obama's stunning victory came even before tight races in Florida and Colorado had been declared. Florida went down to the wire and looked set for a possible recount.

News of Obama's victory was greeted with wild cheering from huge crowds who gathered at New York's Rockefeller Center. Meanwhile, there was gloom on the faces of Mitt Romney's post-lection party in Boston.

Within 15 minutes of the Ohio declaration, Obama tweeted: "We did this together." Analysts said the Romney campaign had failed to engage with ethnic minority voters, especially over issues such as immigration reform, despite Romney having a clear polling lead on the economy, long seen as the acid test of any election.

Obama's victories put pressure on Romney to score victories in Ohio, Florida and Virginia, three battleground states where the race was too close to call.

In the state-by-state battle to get to the 270 electoral votes needed for the presidency, Obama and Romney piled up early victories in the states they were expected to win. METRO

Romney's chances diminished early

The Republican's chances were hit by Obama victories in Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, as well as New Hampshire. Romney last week visited Wisconsin, home state of his vice presidential running mate, Paul Ryan, and stopped in Pennsylvania earlier yesterday in hopes of pulling off a surprise win there.

In a victory that also limited Romney's path to a victory, Obama won Michigan, the Republican's state of birth but where he ran afoul of voters by opposing an auto industry bailout pushed by Obama.

Romney is projected to have won Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Kentucky, West Virginia, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Indiana.

He was declared the winner in Texas, Kansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota.

GOP is in the House

Republicans expected to keep House majority

The most unpopular House of Representatives in modern times was left pretty much unchanged by voters last night, with control firmly in Republican hands, according to projections.

The partisan brand of politics practiced by Republicans for the past two years appeared not to have seriously damaged the party.

When the new House is sworn in next January, it will look much like the House that nearly brought about government shutdowns and an historic default on debt in 2011.

The bitter partisanship in the 435-member chamber was thought to have contributed to record low public approval ratings of Congress that at one point dipped to 10 percent.

If voters did not like the overall tenor of Congress for the past two years, they seemed to remain satisfied with their individual members.

The result could mean at least two more years of divided U.S. government if Obama wins reelection and Democrats retain their control of the "upper chamber" Senate. REUTERS

Obama thanks Romney for a spirited campaign

President Barack Obama congratulated Republican rival Mitt Romney yesterday for running a hard-fought race for the White House and expressed confidence he would win reelection during a stop at a local campaign office to thank volunteers.

Obama made calls to volunteers from the campaign office to thank them for working for his reelection campaign.

"I expect that we'll have a good night, but no matter what happens, I just want to say how much I appreciate everybody who supported me, everybody who's worked so hard on my behalf," he said.

Traditionally, presidential candidates get media attention on Election Day by going to vote. But Obama cast his ballot in Chicago last month — part of his campaign's push to get supporters to vote early.

So the president's visit to the office gave him a chance to get in front of the cameras, generate news coverage and encourage turnout.

Obama and Romney, a former Massachusetts governor and private equity executive, have fought a largely negative campaign. Obama's team attacked Romney for his business record, and Romney's team criticized the president for presiding over high unemployment and a slow economic recovery.

Obama's conciliatory comments represent the close of the bitter campaign and could appeal to last-minute undecided voters, who are turned off by the lack of bipartisanship in Washington. REUTERS

Wanted to vote? Get in line — a long line

Across the nation, complaints arise about voter IDs, ballots, long lines at voting locations on Election Day

Sporadic complaints about voting procedures surfaced from Pennsylvania to Florida yesterday, while long lines in many states posed their own challenges.

It was unclear what impact controversies over everything from the presence of poll watchers to software installation on tabulation machines would eventually have on an election that caps the long and bitter presidential campaign. National opinion polls showed President Barack Obama and Republican challenger Mitt Romney in a virtual dead heat. REUTERS

Pennsylvania gets an earful on IDs

Watchdog groups said there was confusion over voter ID requirements in Pennsylvania, a state Obama had been expected to win, but that Romney visited in recent days as he sought to expand the battleground.

"Poll workers have been poorly and wrongfully trained, and they are standing there and sitting there and requiring people to show ID, and sending people home if they don't have the ID," said Barbara Arnwine, executive director of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights, at a press conference in Washington. "The state of Pennsylvania ought to be ashamed." A judge last month blocked the state from requiring voters to show photo identification, a setback for Republican state officials who had championed the law.

Republicans had their own complaints. The party got a court order to reinstate 75 election officials in Philadelphia who allegedly were prohibited from entering polling places.

Long wait times discourage voters

Long lines at polls in many states prompted concerns that some voters would give up without casting their ballots. Lengthy waits to vote were reported in Florida, Virginia and Ohio, all key swing states, as well as New Jersey and New York.

Civil rights leaders said the lines threatened to be an international embarrassment for the United States. In the densely populated Miami area, wait times yesterday ranged from 15 minutes to more than three hours to vote with a lengthy ballot. A lawsuit had been filed on Sunday in Florida over the waiting times for early voting, which in some cases Saturday stretched to seven hours.

"When you look at the lines that have formed in places like Ohio, they are longer than the lines in Baghdad and Kabul."
WADE HENDERSON, PRESIDENT OF CIVIL RIGHTS CONFERENCE

A study in voting problems

College students voting away from home also ran into problems in Florida. At the massive University of Central Florida in Orlando, with some 58,000 students, many students had to use provisional ballots because their voter registration cards list their home addresses. A new state law for the first time prohibits making address changes on the spot. Another twist in Florida were the hundreds of voters in Clearwater who received automated telephone calls telling them they had until the end of "tomorrow" to vote. The Tampa Bay Times quoted an election supervisor saying that the calls were supposed to have gone out Monday.

Betting on the future

Obama 2-to-1 in futures bet

President Barack Obama is a 2-to-1 favorite to win reelection over Mitt Romney, according to betting on the Intrade.com political futures market.

The BGOV Barometer shows Obama with a 68 percent chance of victory as of 5 p.m. yesterday. That means it cost $6.80 to win $10, should Obama win. Intrade state-by-state wagering gave Obama at least 281 electoral votes, 11 more than he needs to regain the presidency.

That level represents a late jump in bettor sentiment over the 55 percent to 45 percent average advantage the president held over Romney among Intrade betters through the summer. Obama's chances peaked at 79.5 percent on Sept. 29, three weeks after the Democratic convention, according to Carl Wolfenden, Intrade's exchange operations manager. BLOOMBERG

Talking points

Heidi Klum on her new beau

Heidi Klum says she's "very happy" dating her former bodyguard, Martin Kirsten, in the wake of her split from husband Seal. In fact, the new romance has even influenced her movie-viewing habits, as the "Project Runway" host finally sat down to watch "The Bodyguard," she tells Ellen DeGeneres in an interview. "I've actually watched the movie since then. I had to," she says. "That's going to be my Halloween costume next year."

Diaz flirts heavily with Pattinson

"Twilight" co-stars Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart may be back together, but apparently someone forgot to inform Cameron Diaz. The actress reportedly got quite flirty with Pattinson at a recent gala dinner in Los Angeles, according to Us Weekly. "She was pretty obvious," a source says. "Cam was seated next to Rob at dinner. She was touching his arm, doing her big Cameron laugh at everything he said and trying really hard. He was polite but not having it."

Alley admits to Swayze megacrush

It's never too late to tell the truth, apparently. Kirstie Alley has revealed that she and the late Patrick Swayze began an "intense emotional relationship" while filming the 1985 miniseries "North and South," according to Entertainment Tonight. "Both of us were married," Alley explains, adding that she wouldn't call what happened between them "an affair," exactly. "But again, I think what we did was worse," she says. "Because I think when you fall in love with someone when you're married, you jeopardize your own marriage and their marriage. It's doubly bad." Alley says that she's not sure if Swayze's widow, Lisa Niemi — with whom she's still friends — was aware of the relationship before now.

Alley

Jack Nicholson: I'm no sex machine

Jack Nicholson isn't a fan of his reputation as a Hollywood Lothario. "I am an extreme person. If someone says, 'Jack, you are a womanizer,' I don't deny it. But the life of a gigolo always ends badly," the 75-year-old Oscar-winner tells the Sun. "That is one of the reasons I feel uncomfortable about all that 'sex legend' stuff." Nicholson also says that reports of his conquests — he's rumored to have bedded more than 2,000 women — are greatly exaggerated.

In brief

Lohan could go to jail ... again

One of Lindsay Lohan's recent run-ins with the law is coming back to haunt her — and it could mean jail time. The troubled actress was involved in a car accident over the summer, and at the time she told the police she had been a passenger in the car and not the driver despite witness accounts to the contrary. Now, the Santa Monica City Attorney is reportedly planning to file the case as a misdemeanor this week, according to TMZ. And as Lohan is still on probation, a charge of lying to police is enough to send Lohan back to jail, though it likely won't be for very long.

The photographer behind last year's viral sensation has a new book, aptly titled 'Underwater Dogs'
How he came to explore water as a 'fantastic medium'

Seth Casteel makes a splash

Seth Casteel was a photographer who wanted to "capture raw canine emotion." Once he figured out he had to go underwater, he not only caught dogs in their element, but he became a viral sensation in the process. The new book,"Underwater Dogs," contains these now-iconic portraits, as well as new shots.

Q&A

Raw canine emotion

How did you get this idea?
Back in 2010, I was photographing a dog named Buster, a Cavalier King Charles Spaniel. I was doing an on-land shoot with him, but when I arrived he decided to jump in a swimming pool. I thought to myself, "Hmm, I wonder how he looks down there." I took a point-and-shoot underwater camera and started shooting. I learned you can see different personalities on the dogs' faces.

▶ Seth Casteel, 31, at work with dogs

How so?
Water is a fantastic medium where dogs can explore their wildest instincts. We see happy, playful, curious, hysterical. I am also drawn to it because dogs originate from wild dogs and wolves. At the heart of it, dogs still have a wild side to them.

Sandy was Instagram's moment: 1.3 million pics posted

Turns out all that talk about Hurricane Sandy being a watershed moment for Instagram wasn't just hot air. Users snapped 800,000 pics tagged with #Sandy, Instagram CEO Kevin Systrom said this week. (The actual total, according to the app itself: 789,266.)

The second most popular hashtag, we noticed, was #hurricanesandy, attached to 478,925 pics. #Frankenstorm was on 48,000 more. Total it all up, not counting the dozens of minor Sandy related hashtags (or rather, assuming that they balance out the double- and triple-hashtagged pictures, and all the Sandy shots not hashtagged in the heat of the moment) and you get 1.3 million.

At peak times, users were uploading 10 storm-related photos to the service every second.

The Sandy-tagged total dwarfs anything else Instagram users have covered. There were 85,000 pics with the hashtag #SuperBowl earlier this year, Systrom told the GigaOm Road Map conference in San Francisco. It was "likely the most digitally captured event in history," he said.

The company's next challenge, according to Systrom: "How do we mine all these photos, make sense of them so you can consume the most interesting photos about Sandy?" That, he concluded, was why Instagram was going to "have to become a big data company." It also might one day use smart analysis of those pictures — allowing you to locate, say, open gas stations near you.

Console: Nintendo 3DS
Grade: ❶❶❶❶◐

Did you think Nintendo would let the holidays go by without a big Mario game for the 3DS? To the uninitiated, the "Paper Mario" series takes players to the Mushroom Kingdom as envisioned by Lady Gaga. These games are weird, wild and, to fans, wonderful. Think "Super Mario World" sprinkled with RPG mechanics and a healthy dose of LSD.

▶ "Paper Mario"

As the name suggests, this new entry is obsessed with stickers. You use them for everything, from battling enemies and healing to solving the game's many amusing puzzles. The graphics are gorgeous, offering a beautiful paper diorama that screenshots cannot do justice to. The only downside is the lack of experience, equipment and other familiar staples of RPGs. It's all stickers, which can take a little getting used to. Once you do, however, you are in for a great time.

'Halo 4'

Console: Microsoft Xbox 360
Grade: ❶❶❶❶❶

When it was announced that the Halo franchise was shifting to a new developer, gamers were rightly concerned. Could 343 Industries keep Master Chief fresh, while still bringing the fun? The answer is a resounding yes.

"Halo 4" is probably the best console-based FPS of all time. It offers a flawless shooting experience that improves on nearly every feature that made the series so beloved. Gunplay is more fluid, the world is more open and the storyline is actually touching. Plus, the multiplayer is brilliant on all fronts.

JASON WEEKS
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, CAMBRIDGE ARTS COUNCIL

AN ECLECTIC ARTS & CULTURE MASH-UP

When you hear the "People's Republic of Cambridge" there's an immediate and unspoken understanding. With that thought, I offer you a lineup of what Cambridge does best: the eclectic mash-up.

Start your weekend in Harvard Square with the opening reception Friday, Nov. 9 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. for Cambridge Art Association's juried exhibition, Blue: It's more than a color, metaphor, feeling, idea or hue, and view works in all media by talented New England visual artists.

As darkness descends, spice things up with Día de los Muertos, also on Friday, Nov. 9, starting at 7 p.m., at the Multicultural Arts Center in East Cambridge. Take part in body art and face-painting, altar displays, musical performances and festive Mexican food and drink.

By day or night, get ROUND: Cambridge, a new citywide sound art installation, commissioned by the Cambridge Arts Council. Download the app on your smartphone to add your thoughts, questions and reflections related to Public Art throughout Cambridge, and listen to an ever-evolving composition based on these recordings mixed with music.

If you favor classical music, the New School of Music in Harvard Square offers concerts, every second Sunday of the month. Coming up on Sunday, Nov. 11, at 3 p.m. is virtuoso violinist Emil Altschuler.

Art may send your head into the clouds, but what about actually living in the clouds? On Thursday, Nov. 15 at 6:30 p.m., MIT visiting artist Tomas Saraceno, who says he lives and works "between and beyond planet Earth," gives a talk, Moving Beyond Materiality about his creation, "On Space Time Foam," a multilayered habitat of membranes suspended 24 meters above the ground, inspired by cosmology and life sciences.

When you are ready to revisit terrestrial pleasures, visit Central Square, which has an exciting new point of pride. The Massachusetts Cultural Council recently designated it one of the first official Cultural Districts in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts!

Want more? Take a walk on the wild and wonderful Cambridge side of life and partake in all this creative city has to offer!

KILLER STYLE

All dressed up

Ashley Madekwe, one of our favorite starlets from the addictive ABC hit 'Revenge,' isn't just a fashionista onscreen Follow her personal style on 'Ring My Bell'

Most of you know Ashley Madekwe as Ashley Davenport, the social ladder-climbing publicist on the scandalous (and not to mention addictive) ABC show "Revenge." But what you might not know is that the 30-year-old actress is also an avid fashion blogger. The British starlet started Ring My Bell when she moved to the U.S. in 2009 and now has more than 15,000 followers. We caught up with Madekwe to find out what inspired to her start blogging and how to avoid the guilt of, say, dropping a paycheck on Chanel.

▶ Working the peplum

What made you start RMB?
When I moved to New York my boyfriend would take a ton of pictures of me and I would put them on a blog so that my friends and family could keep updated on what I was doing. I really liked reading style blogs and it came from a place of wanting to join in.

What are your aspirations for the blog?
I want to keep it how it is. I like to read blogs about real girls, what they're wearing. I don't want too much chitchat and I want to see great pictures. There are other blogs that do lifestyle and cooking way better than I ever would. I mean, people would die if I tried to put recipes on my blog.

Has Ashley Davenport influenced your style?
I think my style's influenced hers. Because I've always had an interest in fashion, Jill Hanestan, our costume designer, creates the look with me. We talk about what's going to happen in that episode and she lets me take the pick from the choices she brings. She puts all my jewelry in my trailer so I can style the look.

What can we expect next on "Revenge"?
I'm lucky enough to be part of one of the flashback episodes, which I've never been part of before, so we see her six years previously in New York and it's before she knew the Graysons.

What are some items that you're loving for fall?
Tory Burch flats with a fox face on the front. I treated myself to a new Chanel bag, it's blue and velvet. And my Isabel Marant sneakers, [I'm] loving those. I also bought a couple of Kenzo sweaters with big animal heads on the front.

What do you have your eye on at the moment?
I think I need to chill out after that Chanel bag. If you buy everything you want all the time, there's nothing to look forward to. I'm not one of those people who can buy an expensive item and not suffer from guilt. So when I've [splurged] I kind of try to not buy anything else for a while.

Q&A

What's your game plan for putting together an outfit?

There is no plan whatsoever. I do wear the same things over and over again. I have a lot of leopard, stripes, denim and leather. [When I don't know what to wear] I just Google icons. I often do that with Diana Ross or Ronnie Spector.

MARY ELIZABETH WINSTEAD GETS 'SMASHED'

The hipster dream girl takes on the role of a woman struggling with alcoholism in her latest film

SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

▶ Mary Elizabeth Winstead says it's incredibly hard to play drunk.

She's made a name for herself backing up a vampire-slaying Abraham Lincoln, as John McClaine's daughter in "Live Free or Die Hard" and as a hipster dream girl in "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World." But despite the fun she's had in the pop culture movie world, Mary Elizabeth Winstead has been hungry for a good, solid indie drama. But taking on the lead in "Smashed" did come with a few hesitations.

"It was scary for me to take it on because I'd never done anything like that before. And I think for years, like most actors, you sit around going, 'Why can't I get one of those parts that's, like, really great?'" Winstead says with a laugh. "But then when you actually get the part you're like, 'Oh s—, I have to figure out how to do this.' So it was a little scary. But just the fact that I got through it and I did it and the response has been good, my confidence has grown a lot."

Playing an elementary school teacher who realizes she's an alcoholic held several challenges, not least of which was convincingly pretending to be drunk. "It's really daunting. Even the best actors sometimes, it's just really hard," she admits. "The whole thing about being drunk is that you're out of control. And if you're acting, you're sometimes sort of in control and it kind of defeats the whole purpose of making it authentic."

Luckily, Winstead found help in the form of a book, "The Power of the Actor," given to her by co-writer and director James Ponsoldt. "It has an entire chapter dedicated to playing drunk," Winstead explains. "It's kind of just like hypnosis in a way. You just take yourself through all the steps of what it feels like to be drunk, and it just kind of plays a little mind trick on you and you feel really loose and out of your body. It really helped just let me let go of the fear of worrying about whether it felt real or not because I just felt really loose and buzzed, for sure."

MARY ELIZABETH WINSTEAD

Researching the role

Of course, being a drunk only covers half of the journey Winstead's character takes. To research the heart of the story, Winstead spent a month attending Alcoholic Anonymous meetings around Los Angeles — though always at the invitation of a member. "It was great. Everyone was so relatable, and that was my first step," she says. "This wasn't someone different from me. She drinks, and I don't drink a lot, but if you take that part out of it she's pretty much exactly like me. That was my first step into figuring her out."

Ne-Yo sees 'R.E.D.'

'In My Own Words'

Ne-Yo says that although he enjoys performing, what has always been more important to him is that he actually has a song that's worth performing.

"At 9 I discovered the beauty of songwriting," he says. "I didn't know if I was going to be an artist. I didn't know if I was going to play an instrument. But I knew it was going to be music."

With a new album and a new job at one of the leading labels, the man beneath the hat says he is realizing every dream

In the time since his last album, Ne-Yo has become a father for the second time, hit the big screen (with a role in the George Lucas-directed "Red Tails") and he recently took on the job of senior vice president of Artists and Repertoire at a little company known as Universal Motown, a job that music legend Smokey Robinson once held. But even with a full plate, he says he is focused on making sure his newly released set "R.E.D." — which stands for "Realizing Every Dream" — is a success. He sounds quite content as he speaks about how art imitates life with the new album's title.

"I started setting a lot of dreams and aspirations for myself," he says about his childhood. "I wanted to win Grammys. I wanted the respect and appreciation of my peers. I wanted to travel the world behind my music and provide for my family. I can honestly say that from [the age of] 9 until now at 33 years old, just about every dream I set for myself has been realized through music. This album is a celebration of that blessing."

On what he calls the most well-balanced project of his career, "R.E.D." is split between R&B and dance tracks in an effort to satisfy his entire fan base. The result is an album equally useful in the bedroom as it is in the club.

The singer/songwriter has been outspoken about the lack of passion in today's R&B. Yet even with his criticism, he is quickly able to point to a few artists that get him going.

"I love what Frank Ocean is doing with the R&B right now," he says. "He definitely has a different take on it. That's a good step in the right direction. I love what Miguel is doing."

Quoted

"I can honestly say that from [the age of] 9 until now at 33 years old, just about every dream I set for myself has been realized through music."
NE-YO

Ne-Yo also admits that the criticism he offered to Trey Songz was premature.

"I had made some comments about Trey that I have to retract and apologize to him. I hadn't listened to 'Chapter V' yet," he says of Songz's latest work. "He is putting the passion back in it. His performance is definitely there. There are steps [being made] to getting [R&B] back there. We just have to keep it going."

With his new role at Motown, Ne-Yo hopes to be able to do just that. He also says he likes the idea of being a part of history.

"I'd like to be instrumental in the revitalization of Motown," he says. "And more importantly ... I'd like to be able to take the knowledge that I have acquired and ... pass it down."

Muy Cansado 'Let It Go' and release album

Local band finally comes out of the studio for their long-awaited sophomore album But if you're not local you just might have to wait a little longer to buy it

Muy Cansado seem in a rush to play a hometown CD release show for their second full-length, "Let It Go." The official national release isn't until January, but with the Boston-based pop-rock trio's last album coming out so long ago — their debut "Stars & Garters," was issued in 2008 — they're quite ready to air their wares.

"We wanted to just get it out," admits singer and guitarist Chris Mulvey. "These songs took a while. We began recording in March of 2011. The first five songs were the most challenging we've ever done. There were parts of the recording process that were super-smooth and easy. Then there was a time when we just couldn't do it because of everyone's schedule."

But Mulvey says there was no pulling of hair or anxiety.

"We didn't want to start rushing and not get what we wanted. We thought about releasing the five songs as another EP but decided to go full-length."

A couple of older songs were added before they recorded two new songs and found themselves in new sonic territory.

"The title track is significantly different. Before we were writing very Bob Dylan-y," says Mulvey. "But with 'Let It Go,' we thought we could make it disjointed and dance-y. Once we got cooking, we got really excited. It took us out of our normal element. It was kind of a trip."

Then it was time to let it go and get it out.

"It did feel drawn out," Mulvey says of the process, "but it never felt exhausting. Getting it done sometimes just takes time."

Make your doctor work for you

Finding the right doctor doesn't have to cause you any extra pain But the process doesn't stop there: You have to be your own advocate Plus: Top-performing hospitals

The first step in making the most out of your health care is choosing a trustworthy doctor — but where to begin?

"Don't just ask a hospital for a list of doctors," says Dr. Cary Presant, the author of "Surviving American Medicine." "Once a doctor is on staff, they're on the list, good or bad. Talk to nurses, friends and family. Use the Internet to do a background check. If you have a disease, say breast cancer, go to a breast cancer support group and ask for referrals. Ask: 'Who do you trust?'"

To get optimum care, Dr. Presant recommends fully engaging in the medical process with your physician.

"Ask questions," he says. "Say a doctor prescribes a new medication. Ask how effective it is, ask about the side effects and ask the doctor, 'What do you commonly see in patients with this medication?' Then ask him if this is the kind of treatment he'd give his wife or family member. That gives them pause for thought."

CREATAS

▶ Your doctor should be OK with you getting a second opinion, Dr. Presant says. "Any doctor who is reluctant, that's a red flag," he adds.

As the Affordable Care Act funnels more patients into a busy system, doctors increasingly feel overwhelmed and have less and less time to do their jobs effectively, Dr. Presant says. Being proactive is important. Prepare your questions in advance, and consider bringing a trusted family member or friend along for the ride.

"Write a list [of questions] before you go," says Dr. Presant. "Also, listen. Four ears are better than two. Take a family member with you to the doctor's office. They might hear something you don't."

Study subjects: Various laboratory studies
Location of study: U.S.
Results: Research published in the Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics shows strong evidence of a link between a lack of sleep and obesity. Researchers found that people who got four to six hours of sleep for several days had dysfunctional metabolic hormones. Two metabolic hormones, ghrelin and leptin, tell the body when it's hungry and full, respectively. Higher ghrelin and lower leptin were found in sleep-deprived subjects.
Significance: More than 28 percent of adults are estimated to get less than six hours of sleep a night, two hours less than the recommended eight hours.

Communication's impact on cancer

Study subjects: 147 women with breast cancer
Location of study: U.S.
Results: A two-year study at Portland State University found that breast cancer patients who received encouraging news from their physicians and who actively participated in their treatment decisions fared better in fighting the disease.
Significance: A greater level of satisfaction gave patients a more positive, more hopeful outlook. These positively impacted patients' chances for survival, researchers concluded.

Female smokers die a decade earlier

Study subjects: Various data
Location of study: U.K.
Results: The Lancet reports on a long-term study of female smokers that shows that lifelong smokers died 10 years earlier than those who never smoked at all. Women who quit before they were 30 almost entirely cut their risk of premature death from smoking.
Significance: This is the largest study of female smokers in the U.K. to date.

Low vitamin D worsens illnesses

Study subjects: 244 women with various health conditions
Location of study: U.S.
Results: Research presented at the annual 2012 American Society for Clinical Pathology meeting in Boston suggested a link between seasonal vitamin D deficiency in women and worsening of existing conditions such as osteoporosis and diabetes.
Significance: Researchers suggested that women with these health conditions be vigilant of their levels of vitamin D and supplement when necessary.

Carroll must have touched a nerve

RE: "THERE'S NOWHERE TO HIDE FROM US POLITICS AS USUAL" (METRO, NOV. 5) I congratulate news columnist Conn Carroll. He must have said something right to have so many liberals come out against him. They were ridiculing him for having his facts wrong, but I noticed their facts were really wrong. Terrific Conn Carroll, love it.

IGOR MANNIKUS, VIA E-MAIL

Conn Carroll's statement, "Did Americans really care what kind of birth control their employers did nor did not pay for four years ago? Of course not," illustrates how out of touch with a huge segment of American voters he is. Perhaps he is myopic on this subject because he himself can't get pregnant. As the late Florynce Kennedy observed, "If men could get pregnant, abortion would be a sacrament." Carroll's cluelessness is matched by Sen. Todd Akins' (R-Mo.) comment that "If it's a legitimate rape, the female body has ways to try to shut that whole thing down" and Rep. Joe Walsh's (R-Il) brilliant assertion that "With modern technology and science, you can't find one instance of a woman dying from childbirth" and the baloney from Republican John Koster stating that abortion is not justified in cases of incest or "the rape thing." Every woman and every man who has a wife, sister or daughter should be afraid if this mind-set is voted into office. CATHY LANEY, VIA E-MAIL

Don't hate on the heavy and unclassy

RE: "NOT COOL, GAGA" (METRO, NOV. 5) Lady Gaga has been bravely public about living with anorexia and bulimia, eating disorders that affect thousands of Americans. She has even launched an inspirational body revolution. Because of this openness and her role model status, it is inexcusable that Metro responded to her recent weight loss by saying that Lady Gaga has to be skinny to pull off her "meat lingerie" while other singers, like Adele, can be larger because Adele is "classy."

This suggests that it is only acceptable for women to be "heavier," aka: a healthy weight for most women, if they cover up. This type of fat-shaming perpetuates eating disorders, both for Lady Gaga and for thousands of Metro readers. And fat-shaming is not cool.

Positions obscured from all sides

RE: "WE'LL BE HAPPY WHEN $1B SOAP OPERA IS OVER" (METRO, NOV. 6) Your Metropolitik column by Professor Wilson might have been a worthwhile read had you given half the space to the opposing view. The professor mentions, "I don't think even Mitt's most ardent supporter is clearer on his positions." Well, this reader has listened to Barack Obama for six years and I am no clearer on any of Barack's positions — they always seem to side with his audience at any given time. A second note the professor mentions Sen. Scott Brown running constant personal attacks on Elizabeth Warren. Where is the professor when her ads come on?

Horoscope

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. When it comes to involvements in which money is being exchanged between friends, things must be handled with extreme care or someone, perhaps you, will end up feeling cheated.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Even after you've achieved an objective, you must take steps to solidify what you've gained. If you don't, all could slip away.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Friends and companions will be more impressed by the example you set than by the philosophy you espouse. Engage in more doing and a lot less talking.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. You shouldn't have to be told not to take any gambles on people or things that you know little about. There's a chance you'll be more gullible than usual, and you could easily be had.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Inconsistency substantially lessens your possibilities for success. It's quite likely that you'll do things in ways that'll only confuse the people who want to help you.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. In order to stay in control when working on a critical task, you must maintain your patience throughout the job. If you try to rush, a mistake is likely.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Forget about trying for a huge gain by gambling on a big risk. If you can't pull it off, it might cost you far more than what you would have spent doing things the normal way.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. By refusing to let others run certain things that you're ill-equipped to handle, complications are likely to arise. Take your pride out of the picture.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Be very selective as to which of your friends you can poke and tease without eliciting rancor. A sensitive pal might misinterpret your playfulness and take things seriously.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. If you don't handle your commercial matters prudently, any opportunities that do exist could slip through your fingers. Situations in which you would normally do well could end poorly.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. When you lack focus, you'll be unable to bring your forces to bear on important objectives. It's OK to do less, as long as everything is done to the very best of your ability.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Be a positive thinker and behave accordingly. If you start feeling sorry for yourself and making unreasonable demands of others, even those who planned to help you will reject you.

Overrated Bill
Patriots head coach Bill Belichick is overrated, according to a mid-season poll by Sporting News. The anonymous poll surveyed 103 players from 27 NFL teams and Belichick got 16 votes as the most overrated head man in the league. Jets coach Rex Ryan finished first with 35 votes. Andy Reid, head coach of the Eagles, got nine votes in the poll with Washington's Mike Shanahan (8) and Mike Tomlin (4) also receiving votes.

▶ Paul Pierce is averaging 20.3 points per game so far this season.

Sorry, nothing to 'C' right now

Celtics early issues correctable ◗ Entering stretch of six games in nine nights ◗ Wizards in town tonight

Too soon to panic? Three worries through three games:

1 THE BENCH ISN'T THERE YET
We praised what this bench can be numerous times already. But as the old saying goes, they don't play on paper. And unfortunately, the bench hasn't been playing well on the basketball court, either. Jason Terry and Jeff Green are looked at to be the anchors off the bench, but all they've been doing through three games is weighing the team down. Should we expect this to last? No. Terry's still one of the best 3-point shooters in the game, and has a pretty lofty résumé to back up his skills in the NBA. Green, on the other hand, doesn't have that résumé — and fans are already turning on him. Perhaps there's still a little hesitation out there, but he should ease into his role soon. Worry level: Low

2 RONDO'S MINUTES
Rajon Rondo, Kevin Durant and James Harden all share one thing in common. No, Durant and Rondo haven't grown awesome beards. It's that they all lead the league in minutes played, averaging 41.7 per game through three games. Obviously Rondo has the legs to last longer than Paul Pierce and Kevin Garnett (more on him in a second), but that doesn't make the situation ideal. The issue is that Rondo is so important in not only getting the starting unit going, but also getting a bench unit going that is still in the feeling-each-other-out stages. Look for his minutes to eventually go down with Terry gaining more of Doc's trust over time. Worry level: Medium

3 GARNETT AND ...
We know the Celtics are going small. We know that they're built to compete against other small-ball teams. But through three games it appears that an issue from last season is still an issue this season: the lack of a presence down low. Garnett can't do it all, and when he's been out of the game the C's have been getting outplayed. They love Jared Sullinger, and Brandon Bass has played well so far, but neither player is big enough to overpower traditional centers. Green is built more for the small forward spot, and Darko Milicic seems built more for the bench. Chris Wilcox could be the X-factor if he's healthy, but so far C's bigs are either being blocked at the rim or settling for jumpers. Worry level: High ▶ Torii Hunter could be on the Red Sox' wish list.

Sox not showing hand

◗ With Ortiz locked up, attention turns to rest of free agent class ◗ Major acquisition unlikely ◗ Cherington will need to look at several outfielders

The Red Sox signing David Ortiz was the first on-field business to be taken care of this offseason. But coming off of their worst season in 47 years, there is much more to be done, including being active in free agency.

Following the blockbuster trade last August with the Dodgers, the team emphasized being disciplined in terms of their decisions, which would mean seeing the team sign a player to a long-term, large-sum contract is unlikely.

One of the team's biggest needs is an outfielder, and potentiality two, now that it's been learned Cody Ross is reportedly seeking a three-year contract and the team does not want to give in to the third year.

According to WEEI.com, the Red Sox have shown interest in outfielder Torii Hunter, who is 37 years old and nearing the end of his career. Hunter will not be seeking a long-term deal, which could make him a target of the Red Sox. But the question is, can he produce?

Hunter is coming off of a solid season with the Angels, as he hit .313 with 16 home runs and 92 RBIs. Coming to Boston would allow him to reunite with Ortiz, with whom he was roommates 10 years ago in Minnesota.

The Red Sox also need a first baseman next season and will certainly look to free agency to fill the void. Nick Swisher and Adam LaRoche are some of the biggest names on the market, but their asking prices are likely too high for Boston.

A name to keep an eye on is Mike Napoli, who played catcher for the majority of his time in Texas, but is now looking to play first base.

Napoli is coming off of a disappointing year where he hit just .227 with 24 home runs and 56 RBIs, but this could benefit the Red Sox, as his asking price won't be as high as it could have been. He has always performed well against Boston, especially at Fenway.

Post-hurricane problems

Now that the worst is over, it's time to think about repairing the damage Afraid to walk under trees after Sandy? Expert tips on dealing with the aftermath

Identifying dangerous trees

We all watched the trees take a brutal beating during Hurricane Sandy — so if you're like us, you're a little freaked out about wounded branches toppling down. "It's natural that storms bring concerns regarding trees to the front of our mind," says Phil Snyder, northeast operations manager of The Davey Tree Company. "But the last thing we want to do is to create fear around trees." The best away to avoid any damage is to have regular maintenance and checkups of trees on your property, and become comfortable identifying a dangerous tree.

Here are warning signs to look out for:

1 Open cavities
Look for these in the main trunk that go from the ground up to where the tree begins to branch. Check for pockets of decays and holes.

2 Deadwood
These are limbs that have died and can fall at any time.

3 Weak branch union
This is when two major branches grow too closely together. When they are so narrow, there is bark growing between them and that weakens that joint making them more susceptible to split apart.

4 Excessive lean
When we have storms, trees with an excessive lean can become more likely to fall.

Be aware when these micro events happen

There are risks when the weather is bad. Even the safest trees in the world become hazardous when the soil becomes fully saturated during a storm, warns Snyder. "It's not a time to be taking a stroll in the park."

Watch out for "storm-chaser" contractor fraud

HomeAdvisor, a website that connects homeowners with prescreened and customer-rated contractors, gives us tips to finding a reliable service person in the aftermath of Sandy.

- Avoid "travelers" that go door-to-door soliciting work they never plan to provide.
- A reputable contractor will never ask for cash and will never require that the entire job be paid up-front.
- Before agreeing to any costly repairs, seek other opinions.

HomeAdvisor's four questions to ask a contractor

- How long have you been in business?
- Can you provide a list of references?
- Do you belong to any professional associations?
- Are you licensed and registered with the state?

QUITCLAIM DEEDS OF PROPERTY

By Attorney
George Warshaw

When you buy a home in most of Massachusetts you receive at the closing table what is often called a "Quitclaim Deed." That's because the deed comes imprinted with the words "Quitclaim Covenants" in it.

But what does it mean?

Quitclaim Covenants are analogous to a limited warranty made by the seller to the buyer about the quality of title or ownership to the property being transferred.

By using the common phrase "I convey to you [my condo or home] located at . . . with Quitclaim Covenants" – or words to that effect, the seller guarantees that at the time the deed is passed across the table the property is free from liens and encumbrances placed on it by the seller.

Mortgages, property taxes, water and sewer charges, and condo fees are liens on a property until they are paid.

So if a mortgage was granted by the seller and a release of that lien was not recorded on or before the time of sale, the seller remains responsible to obtain it even after the property is sold.

That's important because in Massachusetts the age old rule of "Buyer Beware" is still alive. Once the deed is accepted by a buyer, the buyer's ability to sue the seller later becomes more limited and difficult.

DEAR

- At 45 Province, everything you do with your space is up for discussion
- You choose where each room goes

For most of us, the only problem we have with our penthouse is that we don't have one. Some folks, such as those browsing 45 Province's fully customizable luxury pads, have the added burden of deciding just where to put the dining area to optimize super city views. This Downtown Crossing condo has three floors of deliberately unfinished penthouse spaces that have basic infrastructure such as plumbing, but no walls or finished flooring, etc.

"As a company, we are very familiar with developing customizable spaces," says Audrey Epstein Reny, director of marketing for developers the Abbey Group. "We do build-outs and different layouts for offices and retail. It's the same idea really."

The Abbey Group finished one penthouse as a show home and that's for sale should someone want a ready-to-move-in home. One empty shell has been purchased. The remaining space can be bought in various sizes, either splitting the floor into two or three condos, or one spacious home spread across the whole floor. Homebuyers can bring in their own teams or work with the Abbey Group on the build-out. With the latter, should the homebuyer get too kooky in designing the layout, guidance is on hand to make sure they're not stuck with it forever.

Your future penthouse is now a blank slate. It's up to you what goes where.

This is what your penthouse apartment could look like if you choose to put the dining area here.

Who buys a construction site?

"It's the person who wants to build their dream home," says Epstein Reny. An urban dream home, as with any city dwelling, has limited space. Epstein Reny has one savvy tip for anyone who is maximizing space: "You want to minimize hallways. It's just wasted square footage. You want to plan your space as efficiently as possible."

45 Province's model penthouse has 2,782 square feet, including two private outdoor terraces, two bedrooms and two and a half baths. Listing price: $3.59M. Shell spaces are priced upon request. 45 Province St., Boston; 617-742-0942; 45province.com

the buyer wants. One advantage in using us is that we know the building — after all, we built it," says Epstein Reny. "And we're experienced in designing layouts that would be well-received in a resale situation."
